Contemporary Green

Building green may have never looked this striking. Perched on the hillside, this home, part of the U.S. Department of Energy's Building America program for reducing energy consumption by approximately 50% over standard building practices, offers inspiring curb appeal with a soft-modern look. In the private confines of the home is this spacious master suite with its roomy walk-in custom closet and refreshing spa-like master bath. At the heart of the master bath is a large air tub partially encircled by a room dividing glass block wall, which provides borrowed natural light into the private water closet, cavernous shower, and into the back of the walk-in closet.

Lastly, the emotions of building green come full circle through a balcony off of this master suite that delivers striking views of the countryside.
